With a diverse background encompassing strategic leadership, law enforcement, emergency management, and community engagement, I have honed a multidimensional skill set ideally suited for a role on the Planning and Zoning Commission for the City of Maricopa. Currently serving as the Assistant Director for Special Projects and Strategic Initiatives at the Arizona State University Police Department, my journey has been characterized by a commitment to fostering safe, innovative, and inclusive environments. My educational pursuits, notably a Master of Public Administration and a Master of Arts in Emergency Management and Homeland Security from Arizona State University, have equipped me with a thorough understanding of policy formulation, risk assessment, and stakeholder engagement. Presently, I am advancing towards a Doctor of Education with a focus on the integration of Large Language Model AI (LLMAI) technologies into university police operations, showcasing my adeptness at navigating complex, technology-driven landscapes. Through strategic roles at ASU PD, I have demonstrated a knack for visionary planning and effective execution of initiatives aimed at enhancing operational efficiency and community safety. Notably, the design and implementation of the Campus Safety Aide Program under my leadership addressed staffing challenges while improving data analysis, showcasing my ability to devise solutions in resource-constrained settings. I have actively engaged with diverse stakeholder groups, showcasing my capacity for interdisciplinary collaboration and community building. My tenure includes liaising with internal and external entities, fostering relationships that drive forward the strategic objectives of the department and the broader community. My involvement in various professional organizations like the International Association of Campus Law Enforcement Administrators (IACLEA), the International Association of Emergency Managers (IAEM), the New York Academy of Sciences (NYAS), and the Police Executive Research Forum (PERF) underscores my dedication to continuous learning and cross-sectoral dialogue. These experiences and my educational background have endowed me with a rich perspective on the interplay between public safety, community engagement, and urban planning. As I aspire to serve on the Planning and Zoning Commission, I bring a blend of strategic foresight, a community-centric approach, and a profound understanding of the nuanced challenges and opportunities inherent in urban planning and zoning. I aim to contribute constructively to the City of Maricopa's planning efforts, ensuring a harmonious, safe, and progressive urban development trajectory.
